WARREN COUNTY WATER DISTRICT SUPPORTS EDUCATION
DRAKES CREEK MIDDLE SCHOOL NAMED VIDEO PUBLIC SERVICE ANNOUNCEMENT WINNER

BOWLING GREEN, KY - The Warren County Water District continues to promote education as part of its overall community involvement efforts during Drinking Water Week, May 1-7. Warren Water sponsored their inaugural video public service announcement (PSA) contest, giving local students the opportunity to capture their interpretations of water as an essential natural resource. Drakes Creek Middle School took first and second place honors in the contest.

Drakes Creek Middle School's Student Technology Leadership Program was awarded $150 in prizes and television airtime for their winning PSA. The PSA has been seen on WBKO since April 25 and will run through May 7.

"Drakes Creek Middle School created some excellent PSAs that embodied the spirit of Earth Day and Drinking Water Week," said Alan Vilines, general manager of Warren Water. "We are proud to partner with Warren County Public Schools. These students continue to do outstanding work that demonstrates their knowledge and technical expertise."

Warren Water has been actively promoting Earth Day and Drinking Water Week through school presentations and poster contests, library events and displays, and television and radio interviews.
